The Active Enterprise Network is Now Offering DocCentral

PRESS RELEASE

Denver, CO – In a continued partnership with LPS Real Estate Group, The Active Enterprise Network is now offering DocCentral, an online document management system, to all members. DocCentral is one of the latest LPS products and will allow Enterprise Network members to share and manage their real estate transaction documents from a safe and secure electronic database.

With 24/7 access to their documents through an online portal, members are able to view, share, track and manage files from one centralized location. In addition, DocCentral integrates with existing MLS databases to populate information automatically into each transaction file, saving members the time of having to re-enter data into the system. Information outside the MLS database can be added directly by members as well through email, fax or by uploading it directly from a web browser.

The document management process is made even easier with the inclusion of a customizable checklist feature. Using this feature, members can create a checklist template that will allow them to see which documents have been received or are missing with just a simple glance.

“DocCentral is a cost effective electronic file cabinet that allows members to standardize real estate transactions. Through this secure system, members are able to safeguard these transactions and manage documents online with ease. In addition, because it helps eliminate paperwork, DocCentral has created a more environmentally friendly process,” states John Gadeken, Managing Partner at Active Website.

To make DocCentral more accessible, it is also available on any iPhone, iPad or Android compatible devices. This allows members to view, share, track and manage all of their files on-the-go at anytime during the day. With the ability to brand the online database, members can ensure the system meets their specific branding guidelines as well.
